REGINA.

—Charlie Howson had his arm and hand disabled by a saddle on his horse turning a few days ago.

—Work has been going on steadily on the police riding school. The large arches are ready to be raised.

—Mr. Vander, of Moose Jaw, a proficient musician, has been engaged as organist in the Presbyterian church.

—Operations of the industrial school will commence this week. The foundation and walls will be erected and the building closed in before winter.

—N. H. Russell, B. A., student of Knox College, who will occupy the Presbyterian pulpit here for the summer, preached his first sermon last Sunday morning.

—Excavations for the site of the Lieutenant-Governor's residence are nearly completed. Probably only the foundation of it will be completed this season on account of the lack of government funds.

—Sibbald's block and the old Lansdowne will be removed from the corner of Scarth and South Railway streets, and the new Lansdowne will be extended on the site, which will make a very large building, with three stories and a basement.

SALTCOATS.

—Sports are practising horses daily for the Yorkton races on the Queen's Birthday.

—J. P. Laycock has built a nice stable at the rear of his hotel for his own use. Jim is a rustler.

—Several town lots were sold last week, upon one of which a bakery and boarding-house is being erected.

—There have come a large number of immigrants here this spring, and all seem well pleased with this part of the country.

—If Saltcoats grows for the next six months like it has for the past six, it will be one of the leading towns in the Northwest.

—The people of Crescent had their revenge for their beating at cricket by winning the checker match with the Saltcoats club.

—All the farmers here are through seeding, and crops of all kinds are looking well at the present time. They are fully a month earlier than last year.

—That sweet harbinger of summer, the mosquito, has "venied and viced" and I hope will be "viced" some day or other. He won't be here at Christmas anyway.

—A Mr. Cameron is about starting another brick shop in town. What are still wanted are a good grist mill, hardware store, harness shop, shoemaker, printing office, bakery, and barber shop.

—There is a few pump factory started here under the name of Rutte & Knox. They are both industrious and energetic young men, and no doubt will do well as the demand for their pumps far exceeds the supply.

—A party of our Saltcoats sportsmen, namely, Messrs. G. Knox, Dr. Patrick, A. Bease, Mr. McKillop and C. Manners, started out on Saturday afternoon, the 18th inst., to hunt bears, returning in the evening with one full-grown bear and three cubs after an exciting chase. They are getting quite numerous in this district, as several have been seen lately.

Sir Lister Kaye has just matured an immigration scheme for next season by which two settlers will be placed in each section, the company retaining the other two. Twenty acres will be broken and a house built for each immigrant; implements, stock, etc., furnished; a village plot located in each township, and a school and a church built. An agent is now canvassing, and next spring 7,000 people will be brought out. The scheme is a huge one, but Sir Lister is assured that it will be carried out. Negotiations in this direction have been pending for a year with the above results. The Dominion and Imperial governments are interested.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

POPULAR GARDENING AND FRUIT GROWING FOR MANY SECTIONS.

Fruit Trees in Front Yards—How Carefully Selected, Choice, Well Trained Trees May Prove Ornamental as Well as Profitable.

Few things in nature are more pleasing to the eye than well grown fruit trees when these are blossoming and when carrying a crop of fruit. Why, then, when one's purse and the size of their estate will not permit of landscape gardening, not plan to gain results in which utility and beauty go hand in hand? In a word, why not convert the front yard into dwarf apple or pear plantations? In the accompanying cut—re-engraved from Popular Gardening—is shown one of a type of gardens, common near Paris, planted to fruit trees.

A FRONT YARD PLANTED WITH FRUIT TREES.

A mere spot of ground is planted with carefully selected and choice trees, which, from the beginning, are well trained and properly pruned. The result is, more fruit and of better quality than with ordinary orchard culture, and trees so shapely and graceful that these are, of a variety, ornaments. The trees represented in the cut, it will be observed, are set in cultivated areas outlined by tile edgings. Beneath the trees grow pansies and other flowers that thrive in partial shade. In winter, the graceful pyramidal peach and plum trees against the dividing walls or fences look better than little gardens arranged otherwise. In spring, there is the beauty of blossoms, and in autumn the crowning success—good fruit.

To those who may object to the stiff effect of the straight rows and regular plots bordered by tile, shown in the cut, it is suggested that the trees be planted at regular intervals and in rows, only as a border to walks and screens to walls or fences. In the body of the yard place the trees to suit the eye, the same as is done with purely ornamental trees and shrubs. In this case the ground may be sown to orchard and other grasses that thrive in a partial shade.

Hints in Blackberry Culture.

If we interfere too much with the habits of a plant it will be injured more or less. The blackberry sends a large number of roots near the surface, and these should not be cut or broken, as they always are by deep cultivation. I know a man who succeeded with his raspberries by piling brush between the rows every spring, and never disturbing the ground at all. Another man of my acquaintance put on a few inches of chips and rotten wood from the wood yard every spring, and he rarely failed. Within a mile of my house a friend has the Lawton growing along a fence where the grass grows up among the canes, and he usually has a crop. A plan that is very extensively practiced in the west is to give the new plantation clean culture the first year and seed to clover the second spring. This makes its growth before the berries are formed, and it draws lightly on the soil in the summer, when the berries need all the moisture. It prevents a late growth of the canes and causes them to ripen thoroughly. The fruit is always clean, and there is no growth of weeds. I should think that such pretty close pruning, this method might work well anywhere—Ohio Farmer.

Fan Culture, or Blue Water, for Mildew.

The Arkansas Experiment station, Fayetteville, set out 163 varieties of grape vines last spring, many of which were affected with the downy mildew. On July 1 the Fan Culture, or Blue Water, was applied with satisfactory results. The mildew was completely checked, no further application being made for six weeks, when it appeared again, this time mostly on new foliage and on varieties not previously affected. The station does not recommend waiting until the mildew has appeared, but to apply the solution as a preventive to all the varieties subject to the disease. The Fan Culture was made as follows: Dissolve one pound of sulphate of copper in two or three gallons of warm water, when completely dissolved and the water has cooled add one pint of commercial ammonia, then dilute to twenty-two gallons. Use a force pump and a spraying nozzle.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS.

Acute tools are again cropping up as shawl pin holders.

Colored enamel is being extensively utilized for jewelry handles.

A cute little silver fan covers a blue plush pearl pin cushion.

Ornate silver enclosures are an odd idea in neck ornaments.

The demand for rubies is said to be much in excess of that of last year.

The Scarabeus lost no time in availing herself of the facilities offered. She was a large and powerful ship, with a heavy armament; and, soon getting the range of the syndicate's vessel, she hurled her after ball upon her striped side. Repeller No. 1 made no reply, but quietly submitted to the terrible bombardment. Some of the great shot jarred her from stern to stern, but not one of them broke a steel spring, nor penetrated the heavy inside plates.

After half an hour of this work the director-in-chief became satisfied that the new armor had well acquitted itself in the severe trial to which it had been subjected. Some of the air buffers had been disabled, probably on account of faults in their construction, but these could readily be replaced, and no further injury had been done the vessel. It was not necessary, therefore, to continue the experiment any longer, and besides there was danger that the director-in-chief, being that his antagonist did not appear to be affected by his fire, would approach closer and endeavor to ram her. This was to be avoided, for the Scarabeus was a much larger vessel than Repeller No. 1, and able to run into the latter and sink her by mere preponderance of weight.

It was, therefore, decided to now test the powers of the crabs. Signals were made from Repeller No. 1 to Crab A, which had been lying with the larger vessel between it and the enemy. These signals were made by jets of dense black smoke, which were ejected from a small pipe on the repeller. These slender columns of smoke preserved their cylindrical form for some moments, and were visible at a great distance by day or night, being illuminated in the latter case by electric light. The length and frequency of these jets were regulated by an instrument in the director's room. Thus, by means of long and short puffs, with the proper use of intervals, a message could be projected into the air as a telegraphic instrument would mark it upon paper.

In this manner Crab A was ordered to immediately proceed to the attack of the Scarabeus. The almost submerged vessel steamed rapidly from behind her comports, and made for the British man-of-war.

When the latter vessel perceived the approach of this turtle backed object, squirting little jets of black smoke as she replied to the orders from the repeller. There was great amazement on board. The crab had not been seen before, but as it came rapidly on there was a moment for curiosity or discussion, and several heavy guns were brought to bear upon it. It was difficult to hit a rapidly moving flat object scarcely above the surface of the water, and although several shots struck the crab, they glanced off without in the least interfering with its progress. Crab A soon came near the Scarabeus, and it was impossible to depress the guns of the latter so as to strike her. The great vessel was, therefore, headed toward its assailant, and under a full head of steam dashed directly at it to run it down. The Scarabeus could turn as she pleased, and she turned to one side to allow the surprising man-of-war to pass. Perceiving instantly that it would be difficult to strike this nimble and almost submerged adversary, the commander of the Scarabeus thought it well to let it alone for the present, and to bear down with all speed upon the repeller. But it was easier to hit the crab than to pass it behind. It was capable of great speed, and, following the British vessel, it quickly came up with her.

The course of the Scarabeus was instantly changed, and every effort was made to get the vessel into a position to run down the crab. But this was no easy for so large a ship, and Crab A seemed to have no difficulty in keeping close to her stern.

Several machine guns especially adapted for firing at torpedo boats, or any hostile craft which might be discovered close to a vessel, were now brought to bear upon the crab, but they had no effect, for the crab was too quick to be hit, and she was too close to be hit.

These maneuvers had not continued long when the crew of the crab was ready to bring into action the peculiar apparatus of the crab, and the repeller was now in a position to attack the man-of-war. A tremendous pair of iron forelegs, each massive limb of which measured twelve feet or more in length, was run out in front of the crab at a depth of six or eight feet below the surface. These forelegs were actuated by an electric engine of immense power, by which they could be shot, opened, projected, withdrawn or turned and twisted.

The crab darted forward, and in the next instant the great teeth of her pincers were fastened with a tremendous grip upon the rudder and rudder post of the Scarabeus.

Then followed a sudden twist, which sent a thrill through both vessels, a crash, a backward jerk, the snapping of a chain, and in a moment the great rudder, with half of the rudder post attached, was torn from the vessel, and as the force opened it dropped to leeward and hung dangling by one chain.

Again the forelegs opened wide; again there was a rush, and this time the huge jaws closed upon the rapidly revolving screw propeller. There was a tremendous crash, and the small but massive crab turned over so far that for an instant one of its sides was plainly visible above the water. The blades of the propeller were crushed and shattered; those parts of the steamer's engine connecting with the propeller shaft were snapped and rent apart, while the propeller shaft itself was broken by the violent stoppage.

The crab, which had quickly righted, now backed, still holding the crushed propeller in its iron grasp, and as it moved away from the Scarabeus, it extracted about forty feet of its propeller shaft; then, opening its massive jaws, it allowed the useless mass of iron to drop to the bottom of the sea.

Every man on board the Scarabeus was wild with amazement and excitement. Few could comprehend what had happened, but this very quickly became evident. So far as motive power was concerned, the Scarabeus was totally disabled. She could not direct her course, for her rudder was gone; her propeller was gone; her engines were useless, and she could do no more than coast as wind or tide might move her. Moreover, there was a jagged hole in her stern where the shaft had been, and through this the water was pouring into the vessel. As a man-of-war the Scarabeus was worthless.

Orders now came fast from Repeller No. 1, which had moved nearer to the scene of conflict. It was to be supposed that the disabled ship was properly furnished with bulkheads, so that the water would not penetrate so far as the stern compartment, and that, therefore, she was in no danger of sinking. Crab A was ordered to make fast to the bow of the Scarabeus, and tow her toward two men-of-war, which were rapidly approaching from the harbor.

Sunday School Lessons.

In this country where settlement is so recent and many have not frequent opportunities of attending public worship, our Bible lessons will be of great help to the study of one set portion of Scripture for each Sunday. The head of the family should select its members around him and, if possible, one son and one daughter, then read the portion of Scripture set for the day, take each verse and try to judge each member of the family to talk about it and ask questions. The comments on the lessons are given with the aim of being interesting and valuable to aid in answering questions. This should not, however, be allowed to interfere with opportunities to attend to preaching services as frequently as possible. To the parents, the Sunday school teacher and scholar our Bible study column comes in handy by experience.

JESUS FIRST TRIAL.

LESSON IX, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 2.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 53, 65-Commentary Verses 55, 56-Golden Text, John xv, 25-Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]
53. "And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put Him to death, and found none." After the arrest they bound Him and led Him away to Annas, the father-in-law of Caiaphas, the high priest, and if we accept the II V. of John xviii, 24, it would seem that the conversation and smiting of Jesus recorded in John xviii, 19-24, took place before Annas, where he was sent Him bound to Caiaphas, where we now find Him in the presence of the priests and council who are seeking evidence against Him that they may have some plausible reason for putting Him to death. A good while before this they had determined to kill Him (Matt. xii, 14; John xi, 53), but lacked opportunity because His hour had not come (John vi, 30; vii, 26); but now that His hour had come (John vii, 1; xvi, 32) and He had suffered them to take Him, they felt that they must have some semblance of right in what they were about to do. To find some real evidence of guilt on His part was the hardest work they ever undertook, for His life was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners; His life and teaching had been open to all, and nothing inconsistent with His public teaching had ever been said in secret (John vi, 30; John xiv, 20). Every office had to be without blemish, and as He is about to become a sacrifice for that nation, according to the very words of Caiaphas, unwittingly spoken (John xi, 51-52), they are, without knowing it, proving Him to be the Lamb of God without blemish and without spot, a fit sacrifice for their sins and for the sins of the world.

54. "Many were false witnesses against Him, but their witness agreed not together." This also was foretold concerning Him, for it is written in the Psalms, "False witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty," and again, "False witnesses shall rise up; they laid to my charge things which I knew not." (Ps. cxviii, 12; xxiv, 11.)

55. "And there arose certain and bare false witness against Him." Mark xiv, 56, says, "At the last came two false witnesses," who remain of the two men, sons of Belial, whom Jesus caused to testify against Naboth that he might be put to death (I Kings xxi, 7-10). It is the same principle all through the Bible from the days of Abel to the days of Jesus, and inasmuch as the devil is the author of it, and he is still at large, we may expect to find it prevailing till the Lord come and the devil is shut up and sealed in the bottomless pit. "The wicked watcheth the righteous and seeketh to slay him; the Lord will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged." (Ps. cxviii, 22, 23.)

56. "We heard Him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands." Just what He did say, we destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up" (John ii, 19), and John says that He spoke of the temple of His body; but they make Him say that He Himself would destroy the temple, and build it up again. He was forty-six years in building, and in three days build another. They cast the same thing at Him as He hung upon the cross (Mark xv, 29), not knowing that they were thus destroying the temple, and that in three days it would be raised up. Observe two things here: If we are members of His body, let us not think it strange if our words are oftentimes perverted and we are made to say things which we never intended to say, but rather let us count it another privilege of fellowship with Him in His sufferings, then consider as members of His body the resurrection which awaits that body, when perhaps we may see an actually restored temple at Jerusalem some new light upon Hos. vi, 2, "After two days will He revive us; in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." We shall know if we follow on to know the Lord.

57. "Neither so did their witness agree together." The law said that a man could not be condemned nor put to death at the mouth of one witness, but that it must be by the testimony of at least two or three witnesses (Deut. xix, 6; xix, 15), and yet up to this time they cannot get two witnesses to agree, so they had no case.

58. "And the high priest stood up in the midst and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witnesses against Thee?" The high priest thus grew evasive of his feelings against the one a trial, which he has now allowed to overtake him and cause him to act and speak in this unjust way, he knew that according to their own law there was no case against the prisoner, for nothing but a formal confession, leaving him no two of the witnesses agreed.

59. "But He said His peace and answered nothing." Nothing being confirmed against Him, there was nothing for Him to reply to; the law was on his side, and he was not of those false, murderous hypocrites, He majestically made His peace.

60. "And Jesus said, I am." To keep us from being in the face of such a question would be to deny that He was the Christ, therefore He says again in the magnificent words of Ex. xli, 1. When Moses wished to know what he would say to the children of Israel as to who sent him he was instructed to say "I AM hath sent me unto you," concerning which some one has written:

When God would touch mankind His name, He calls Himself the great "I AM." And leaves a blank—no believers may supply these things for which they pray. Many scholars will remember how he said "I am the living bread—I am the light of the world—I am the door—I am the good shepherd—I am the resurrection and the life," etc. There are at least twelve such titles in John and seven in Revelation; and often where you read "I am He," it is simply "I am," for "he" is in italics, which means that it is not in the original. See John viii, 24, 28; xii, 19; xvi, 28.

"And ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." What a contrast this will be. See Him in this lesson standing apparently helpless and friendless before an unjust judge, and think of Him when He shall come in His glory, and sit upon the throne of His glory, and before Him shall be gathered all nations. (Matt. xxv, 31, 32.)
61. "Then the high priest rent his clothes, and said, What need we any further witnesses? Apparently Jesus is guilty of blasphemy and this holy high priest is full of righteous indignation; but in the eyes of the God of Israel, Jesus, the Christ, the Son of the Most High, the Son of Man, has spoken the truth, and this rending of garments and apparently holy wraths is all of the devil.
62. "Ye have heard the blasphemy; what think ye? And they all condemned Him to be guilty of death." Just as He Himself had foretold and as God had before determined (Matt. xx, 18; Acts iv, 27, 28); but that does not in any way excuse them.

FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1890.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

To-day is the anniversary of the birthday of Her Majesty the Queen and it is being celebrated in Qu'Appelle in a most Royal manner. We had intended to publish some lengthy articles and illustrations appropriate for the day, but as our issue is published before the celebration takes place we have deferred the whole matter till next week so that it may all appear in one issue.

CANADA'S NEW PARTY.

We have received a copy of the "New Party Bulletin," a monthly published regular the establishment of a regular weekly organ. It is a bright publication in support of advanced political ideas crystallized into a platform which ought to commend itself to every right thinking man. The platform of the new party is as follows:

1. Righteousness and Truth in Public Affairs as well as in private business, and no compromise with wrong.
2. Equal rights for all Creeds, Classes and Nationalities, but exclusive privileges to none.
3. National Sentiment, a National Literature, and in all matters of public policy—Our Country First.
4. The Prompt and Absolute Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic as the objective point of Temperance Legislation; in the meantime the honest and vigorous enforcement of the Scott Act and of all other laws for the repression of Vice and Intemperance.
5. Retrenchment and Economy in Public Expenditure, with a view of reducing our enormous National Debt.
6. Manhood Suffrage, with an educational qualification; that is a vote to every freeman of legal age who can read and write.
7. The extension of the Franchise to Women.
8. An Elective Senate.
9. Civil Service Reform.

The signs of the times indicate that a break in the old parties is not far distant, and that it will be in the direction of the principles of the New Party. There are thousands in the old parties who have looked in vain to their party for the reforms embodied in the foregoing platform. They will speedily swell the ranks of the New Party which is fast growing in strength in the province of Ontario, with scattering membership in the other provinces. THE PROGRESS, true to its name, endorses every plank in the platform of the new party, and will give it a hearty support.

Hon. Mr. Dewdney is endeavoring to induce the C. P. R. to extend their summer excursions to Moose Jaw and intermediate points.

ANOTHER HERO GONE.

When the news was received in Qu'Appelle that Major Short, of "B" battery, R. C. A., had been killed, a feeling of horror, mingled with admiration for the bravery and other excellent qualities of the Major was experienced by the citizens.

Immediately following the sad news of the deaths of Major Short and Sergeant Wallack, of "B" battery, at a fire in Quebec, a meeting of the residents of Qu'Appelle was convened by the mayor and the following resolutions were passed.

"That the residents of this place have received with deep sorrow the news of the fatal accident at Quebec resulting in the deaths of Major Short and Sergeant Wallack, of "B" battery.

"That they desire to place on record their sincere appreciation of the many qualities possessed by the gallant officer who commanded "B" battery when stationed here subsequent to the rebellion of 1885, and to express their sympathy with Mrs. Short and the friends of Sergeant Wallack in their painful bereavement, and the officers and men of "B" battery in the loss of an officer who both honored and adorned the profession which he followed."

"That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Mrs. Short, the friends of Sergeant Wallack, and the officer commanding "B" battery."

QUEBEC, May 16.—The city had an awful visit from fire to-day and over 800 people are homeless. Where yesterday 500 houses stood to-day there is nothing but ashes. The worst of it is, however, that the fire is attended by the death of one of the most distinguished officers of the Canadian militia, Major Short, of "B" battery, who was blown to pieces by the premature explosion of a blast while trying to stop the fire by blowing up the houses in its path. Sergeant Wallack, of the same corps, was also killed. The fire broke out last midnight in a wooden house occupied by Mrs. McCann on Valler street, St. Sauveur, and soon spread. A strong wind was blowing and it was impossible, owing to the lack of water, to stay the progress of the flames. The mass of wooden houses soon became a prey to the conflagration, and the firemen were unable to do anything beyond saving life. At 7:30 o'clock Major Short and Sergeant Wallack, of "B" battery, were killed by an explosion of gunpowder, which they had placed in a wooden building in order to blow it up. They had already blown up four buildings and concluded that a fifth was necessary to arrest the flames. The powder was placed in the centre of the room on the first flat and a lighted fuse attached to it. The place was then cleared of people, but the explosion not going off as expected, Major Short, followed by Sergt. Wallack, entered the premises, and were hardly there a second or two when the explosion took place, shattering the body of Short into a thousand pieces and sending Sergeant Wallack through the roof. He was blown about 200 feet from the place of the explosion on to a pile of red hot ashes and there lay bleeding and bruised in terrible agony. An ambulance was obtained and Wallack carried to the Marine Hospital where he died about 10 o'clock.

The remains of Major Short were gathered together and removed to the citadel in a wagon. A portion of the head and trunk of the body were found some distance apart, but no trace of his legs were found. Major Short was one of the most highly respected officers of the battery. He went through the Northwest rebellion in 1885 and was at Cat Knife.

The remains of Major Short were removed to Kingston on Saturday morning. The military cortege from the citadel to the English Cathedral thence to the G. T. R. ferry was the most imposing ever seen in this city. Lieut. Governor Angers has sent $100 to the fund for the relief of the sufferers. The Quebec city council and town council of St. Sauveur both passed resolutions of condolence and regret at the deaths of Short and Wallack. The verdict of the coroner's inquest says: "The jurors wish to place on record their high appreciation of the coolness and self-devotion displayed by Major Short and Sergeant Wallack, thus sacrificing themselves for the lives and property of their fellow-citizens. Further the jurors regret that owing to the neglect and delay of the municipal council of St. Sauveur in obtaining a proper supply of water for the municipality, the fire occurred resulting in such a loss of life and great destruction of property."

Correct estimates of the number of buildings destroyed in St. Sauveur are impossible to obtain, but are believed to be not less than 500 or more than 700. The value of the property destroyed is placed at $800,000, with an insurance of not more than $100,000. Scenes in the burnt district were deplorable in the extreme, and hair-breadth escapes are reported on all sides. In one instance three men of "B" battery had to carry a crazy woman, Madame Alouin, from her half burnt home by main force. In another a woman hurled herself into a mass of settling flames to rescue her jewels and was only saved with the greatest of difficulty. There were cases of fractures of arms and legs reported and a rumor of the drowning of a woman in an open well. The story of the discovery of Major Short's body is painful in the extreme. Immediately after the explosion the artillerymen, with a dash, began the dislodgment of boards and beams, and hauled from the ruins the still breathing but fearfully injured and disfigured body of the stalwart and handsome young sergeant. From one arm a ghastly white bone was protruding; half of one foot was blown away, both legs were badly broken, and the face and trunk wounded. It seemed a miracle when the pinched and nerveless lips framed a request for water. Further efforts to reach the spot where Major Short lay were suspended, and the battery-men, unable to maintain their soldierly bearing from excess of feeling, were compelled to stand by with idle hands while the flames cracked and hissed over the remains of their officer. Together they had braved danger with unbroken front in riots and street troubles when blood flowed freely; without murmur they had suffered the hardships and borne the brunt of the Northwest campaign against the rebels and now it was with tear-stained faces and tottering bent frames that they stood around the blazing fire, some speechless with horror and some with lamentations upon their lips, being so near their hero and yet so helpless. It was not until three hours had passed that they could approach the fatal pile. Then when the half burned beams and rubbish had been thrown aside a crushed trunk with no legs, a skull with a fringe of light hair at the back of the head was about all that remained to identify the major. The body when found was conveyed to the citadel and the sergeant carried to the Marine hospital. Sergeant Wallack was to have been married next week. He was a native of Cluneph and only 28 years old. Colonel Rhodes this morning received a cable despatch from the Princess Louise and Lord Lorne expressing their grief and asking that a wreath be placed on Major Short's coffin in their names.

The surveys of land in the Northwest are limited this year because the Government surveys are in advance of settlement. In a few places where settlement is just reaching some parties are at work and starting from Winnipeg. The first of these places is between lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba, where there is an excellent tract of country and where the settlers, principally Icelanders, are coming in in large numbers. We are now preparing for the sub-division of exterior lines of townships there. Men are also engaged in the work of sub-division at Lake Dauphin, while others are engaged in extending the exterior lines of the township between Duck and Rolling Mountains, north of Minnedosa. There is a very fine country between the two mountains. We will have some further surveys of township outlines and also subdivision of townships in the vicinity of Barr Hills and around Devil's Lake on the line of the Manitoba & Northwestern railway, as the company wants land ready for settlement by the time the road is completed. Around the muskeg lake near Carleton, where there is a half-breed settlement, it is reported that as soon as the surveys are completed that settlement will rapidly follow. Then a survey of a settlement at Lac La Biche, another half-breed district near Athabasca River, is being proceeded with. That is the furthest point north where settlement has so far reached. Some scattered surveys in the McLeod and Calgary districts are also carried on and some old trails located, while four parties working under directions from the inspector of surveys at different points in British Columbia. Two parties are at work in New Westminster and one at Kamloops, sub-dividing land for settlement. Another party had started for Golden, on the Columbia River, to survey the river at that point. Two parties are also at work in the mountains sub-dividing and making a map of the country at the same time. This constitutes the season's work.

Newsy Notes.

The Week's News Boiled down for Progress Readers.

Major Short's funeral took place on Saturday with military honors at Kingston.

The Canada Gazette revokes the Scott Act in all places where it was repealed April 4th. This wipes the act clean out of Ontario save in Elgin, where a petition for repeal is pending.

A passenger train was run into from the rear by a timber train on the Madoc branch of the Grand Trunk this morning. Seventeen passengers were injured but only two seriously. They are Ryan, a horse buyer of Montreal, and Mrs. French, of Huntingdon.

It is rumored that James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald, has gone to Khartoum to ransom General Gordon from the new Mahdi for one million francs. The story is that Gordon was not killed by the Mahdi's people as has been supposed, but was made prisoner, and that an offer to release him for the sum named has been made. Mr. Bennett has certainly been in Egypt of late, but nothing further can be learned.

The yearly average consumption of liquor in Ontario for the four years ending 1887 was 916 gallons of spirits per thousand of population; 4322 gallons of beer and 243 gallons of wine. For the year 1888 the consumption was 580 gallons of spirits per thousand; 4856 gallons of beer; 22 gallons of wine. In all Canada the yearly average for the four years ending 1887 was 985 gallons of spirits per thousand; 2871½ gallons of beer; 1051 gallons of wine. For the year 1888 the consumption was 645 gallons of spirits per thousand; 3247 gallons of beer and 94 gallons of wine.

In an interview on the 20th Cure Labelle, deputy-minister of agriculture, declared it was useless to attempt to repatriate the French Canadians who had gone to the States, and that the increase of the French population would depend on the natural increase of immigration from old France. He did not think there was much chance of a large French population in the Northwest, as the French race always gravitate to the banks of the St. Lawrence. The Cure condemned the system of permitting land in the Northwest to be tied up by speculators, and said it should be sold at a low price to settlers.

Inquiry at the Department of State based upon the report from Ottawa that a British war vessel is to be sent to Behring's sea to investigate the seizures of illegal sealers, elicits the fact that nothing has been done by the American Government in the matter since the issue of the President's proclamation which distinctly notified all nations of the intentions of the United States to protect the seal and fish life. It is presumed that the Treasury Department, through the revenue marine service, will carry out the provisions of the statutes enacted to that end. At present the only Government vessels in Alaskan waters are revenue cutters, but they will be reinforced soon by the man-of-war "Thetis," which is now at San Francisco preparing for a summer cruise.

QUICK TIME—48 HOURS.
"I always use Hingray's Pectoral Balm for colds and it cannot be beaten. It has always cured me within 48 hours, which is no other medicine will do, and I always keep a bottle by me." These words from Chester Miller, Leamy, Ont., prove efficacy of a popular preparation.

The Great War Syndicate!

BY FRANK R. STOCKTON.

THE FIRST GREAT NAVAL BATTLE OF THE WAR SYNDICATE.

The editor of this paper begs to announce that he has made arrangements with "Collier's Once a Week," through the American Press Association, whereby this paper will be enabled to publish in serial form,

The Most Extraordinary Story of the Century.

THE GREAT WAR SYNDICATE,

By FRANK R. STOCKTON, the famous litterateur, author of "Rudder Grange," "Amos Kilbright—His Adversitious Experiences," "The Bee-Man of Orin," "The Christmas Wreck," "The Lady or the Tiger," "The Late Mrs. Null," "The Hundredth Man," "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Alshine," "The Dusanets," Etc.

Mr. Stockton's powers of fascination were never so thoroughly exerted as in this most extraordinary story—

A Story Which Holds the Reader Breathless from Beginning to End.

Its appearance in "Collier's Once a Week" has caused the literary sensation of the year, and to its marvelous enchantment this enterprising and charming paper owes much of its signal and phenomenal success.

No. 344.—Disquisitions.
First, it is very easy to see through me.
Because I think you do it every day.
Demstrate me I will be
A pretty little girl at play.
Debatd again, and it appears to your eye
What a stately queen quadruped am I.
What is it of me, it is for you to know,
I'm something but two exonsomate though.

No. 345.—A Tangle of Wise Words.
How exomemur from nigh in noon demsed solo taut you lost.

No. 346.—Illustrated Numerical Enigma.

Every word that is represented by figure is a noun, and all are pictured in the accompanying illustration.
Though your ambition near like a 31-41-40, unless you climb the 30-23-24-3, or take the 30-29-3-44, or man the 30-17-30-24-23-4, or wield the 10-47-30-13-41, or raise the 11-3-33, or guide the 14-34-25-12-45-4, or work the 14-27-18-27-34, or handle the 22-41-4-4-21, or try the 27-35-10-13-41, or string the 51-32-35-43, or strike the 31-30-10, or ply the 26-46-15-4, or win the honor of a 31-18-47-2-2-28, you will prove the truth of the whole quotation, which is from Shakespeare.—St. Nicholas.

No. 347.—A Marine Square.
This is composed of words of seven letters each. The first word represents the name of the beam or timber upon which the broadest part of a vessel is formed. The second, a spear used in capturing large fish. The third,
"havana," the fourth, "the act of reaching a place from a distance." The fifth, "a small anchor with four or five flukes." The sixth,
"a steamship." The seventh, "a traveler."
The diagonal from upper left to lower right conspires represents "a seaman."

No. 348.—Easy Redux.
My 1, 2, 3 across the band
On 4, 5, 6 down carry
My 1 to 6 we both will stand
The day we both shall marry.

No. 349.—Buried Birds.
(Two birds are concealed in each sentence.)
We saw on our tour a company of gypsies wandering about.
A red caught a rat in a mouse trap—in tail
first it was too!
She began netting me, else we wouldn't have had a word.
Yes, he is a very sharp young fellow, and very smart in his way.
It is seldom a visitor uses such awkward expressions.
Mr. Jones will not rebuild his wall, owing to the high rate allowed masons.

No. 350.—Pie.
ONUBIGUSONREIO.
Arrange the above letters right, and the name of a tale well known to children will appear.

No. 351.—Old Enigmas.
Write one hundred and add one.
And then with the unit
When one and fifty you have joined.
You'll have what is polite.
If one thousand you add one,
Then fifty and five hundred.
You'll have what's gentle, good and kind,
Or use I must have bounded.

Choice Recipes.
To make a lemon drop—Let it fall off the table.
To make a steam cake—Use plenty of orange fruit.
To make an ice cream—Stick a pin in the bowl.
To make catsup—Give them milk.
To make a window blind—Fill it up with ticks and mortar.
To prevent the squeaking of a door—Nail
it up.
To ascertain the weight of a horse—Put your toe under the animal's foot.
Finally, to keep your bills down—Put 'em
in the coal scuttle.

A Trick Answer Can Perform.
You take a piece of paper, place three of them on the back of your hand, and as a preliminary question show them away with no air of great mystery, informing your audience at the same time that you are about to explain to them some new kind of magnetism. Then, placing the other three pieces on your hand, you say "Which of the three pieces do the company desire shall remain on my hand when I blow on them?" When you have been selected, you place the forefinger of your other hand upon it and blow the other pieces away. This absurd performance is a very amusing party trick.

Key to the Puzzles.
No. 344.—Quint: 1. Life. 2. Strong drink. 3. A dead tooth extracted. 4. A laborer. 5. A woman. 6. A match. 7. A secret.

Sold silver penholders with quat figures engraved thereon are interesting additions to office accoutrements.

Fruit designs in natural colored enamel are applied to lace pins of heavy filigree, making a most charming ornament.

Fine yellow enamel balls now form hairpin tops, and are covered with filigree gold, with here and there a tiny ruby.

The natural bark of a tree twisted and and knotted, and covered with a silver deposit, makes a very attractive umbrella top.

Claret, jugs of colored and cut glass, with bright silver mountings, have made their appearance on the dining room table.

A correctly defined thumb, down to the first joint, is one of the brightest and newest receptions in oxidized silver match boxes.

A brooch of simple but tasty character is formed of a circle of vermilion gold beads graduating in size each way from the center.
